Out on the tumbling waves of the Atlantic, behind her a war-swept mother country in whose defense her American father had fallen at the Battle of the Marne, ahead of her a grim, woman-hating Uncle, estranged from his brother by the girl's French mother—Roberta, Marquise of Grez and Bye, quaintly American, piquantly French, adorably feminine, is set out on her great adventure. At New York there is no Uncle to meet her, only a letter.

Its promise of healing for the little crippled brother, of welcome in this strange land, is headed with the astounding misunderstanding: "Nephew Robert!" There is to be no welcome for petticoats—and so much depends on pleasing the irascible old Statesman!

Her father had called her "Daredevil"—she was tall for a woman and broad of shoulder; her tresses clipped, the apparel of a young man secured—and Roberta, the Marquise, becomes Robert Carruthers, a gay, stout-hearted masquerader. And then—romance, intrigues, plots of enemies of France and crooked contract agents, dancing under the radiant Southern moon, rides in the mountains with that flower of Southern chivalry, "the Gouverneur of Harpeth," and in the end, love that comes in the guise of friendship.

First prize—$50.00—awarded to Fred E. Woodward

A BEST BOOK

One of the best books of the year 1915 was called "Ross Grant, Tenderfoot" by John Garland.

The book was issued by the Penn Publishing Company, one of the publishing houses of the United States, whose books are always thoroughly good and readable, and whose careful and judicious discretion in selection of books has become a byword.

The story of Ross Grant is a gripping one, and fascinates the reader. The scene is laid in a new region of our continent, just far enough away from civilization to be romantically attractive. The characters who live in the pages are not wooden men on stilts, but they actually exist and work out their own destines as the story unfolds, ever aglow with the strong, robust and hardy life of the out-door wilds.

The reader feels that Ross Grant is only a stripling when years are reckoned, and many of his characteristic traits are those of an exuberant boy, scarcely out of school, yet he is aware of a certain manliness of purpose and character rising almost to heroic genius, when occasion arises.

The book is carefully written and well arranged; plot and counterplot are in evidence but not obtrusively so, and the culminating surprise comes with the dawning knowledge of the true location of the snow-bound, peril-encompassed camp in which Ross Grant was held a captive, through long winter months.

There is a certain wholesomeness about the entire book, an absence of goody-goody sentiment, a strenuous march of well-timed events, and a large whiff of God's true out-of-doors, that quickens the pulse and stirs the blood of the reader. It is not a girl's book, but it's good reading for boys from twelve to sixty-five.

The other prizes were awarded as follows:

Second prize—$20.00—Edna E. Chase, Gimbel Bros., Philadelphia.

Third prize—$15.00—Nina Mitchell, The Broadway Department Store, Los Angeles, Calif.

Fourth prize—$10.00—S. Glosson Gavel, DeWolfe & Fiske Co., Boston.

Fifth prize—$5.00—Anna Faith Taylor, Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York.

A pamphlet containing the five prize winning contributions will be sent to anyone in the trade who may care to see it. It is well worth reading.

THE "PROBLEM" OF PUBLISHING.

MR. TEMPLE SCOTT is, of course, perfectly right when he selects effective distribution as the pre-eminent problem of book publishing, and effective advertising as the very crux of that problem. But what of the feasibility of the remedy he would apply?

We all have an instinctive caution of panaceas. And Mr. Scott, from his long book-trade experience, has become too well acquainted with its difficulties and dangers to have any idea of suggesting a panacea. Indeed, from his point of view, there are no factors in the production of books that have so far attained anything more than negative efficiency, most of them are hopelessly bad: the author is carelessly greedy, the publisher asleep to modern conditions, the American bookseller "ignorant and untrained," book-selling methods are "antiquated" and laboring under "a confusion and a delusion," book advertising is "a thousand repetitions of feeble and jejune expressions which mean anything or nothing," and last—but we modestly believe no means least—"the publishers' trade paper should be remodeled!"

Having belabored all of us impartially and by no means ineffectively, Mr. Scott proceeds, in his paper (of which the first half appeared in last week's PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY and the concluding half elsewhere in this issue) to re-say a number of un-original things in original fashion and to suggest a number of other things that are both pungent and thought-provoking.

Every student of American book publishing conditions will, we think, endorse heartily the emphasis he throws upon the desirabilty of publishing, pushing and selling worth-while non-fiction rather than the omnipresent and only too often vapid "best-seller." Mr. Scott is not very far wrong in suggesting that the "best-seller," with its easy sales, has led us, as a trade, astray. It is the hard sale, the sale that requires selling, that spells both profits and future sales, and as the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has often iterated—though perhaps not in these same words—it is in non-fiction, the sale of solid books, that the American book-trade is ultimately going to find its salvation.

But again what of Mr. Scott's solution? It seems to hang itself around or upon a paragon called an "advertising expert." This expert will not be a recognized advertising man, for he, we are told, "will be utterly at sea in dealing with books." This expert, by his "insight and analysis," will "compel" the attention of every book's possible audience to it at the time of its publication. He is first to pass, with the publisher, upon the desirability of publishing each book. He must know how much money to spend and the mediums. He must be a "composite of the scholar and the business man." He must be able to "distill the selling essence" of each book into a few words, and so present them in twenty-five or fifty lines of newspaper space, present them in so "distinguished and arresting a way" as to ensure the book's success. He must—but what's the use? Mr. Scott agrees such experts are not common, and we suspect that when one does appear he very shortly finds himself, not a book advertising expert, but the proprietor and head of a growing and prosperous publishing business. He has all the qualifications for that position.

In short we believe that Mr. Scot will meet with general agreement in his main thesis: the difficulty that every publisher faces is not in theory but in fact. The publisher knows the advertising ideal he would like his business to exemplify; but he has great difficulty in securing the human agents to materialize that ideal. Mr. Scott is everlastingly right in saying that "the genius of publishing is to sell what is not known, but what is worthy of being known"—the thought, so crisply phrased, is worthy of italicization; but to "publish" in that sense is a difficult undertaking; it needs more than brains, it needs—genius!

Curiously, with one suggestion of Mr. Scott's we run in complete accord. We have no idea that he meant to tender a free advertisement to our Book Review, but we cannot help believing that that is what he has really done. He asks, as the crown and center of the publishers' new book propaganda, "a reliable book-buyer's guide, a medium for every household" through which they may be apprised of the new books and their true values. He suggests that it be issued "monthly" and sold and distributed "at a nominal charge." It should contain "very short and telling reviews" in a readable, popular, but helpful vein, "and should appeal to every taste and every want by a contents so varied . . . as to make it . . . inviting." "Its circulation should be promoted by every bookseller and every librarian." The guide would soon, he believes, be self-supporting, "if the publishers supported it with their advertising." The Book Review is still far from the ideal we have set for it, but that ideal and Mr. Scott's ideal "Guide," if we visualize it aright from his description, do not seem to be far apart.

Mr. Scott has some things to say about trade paper advertising which, lest they be overlooked in his paper, we are going to repeat here. He criticizes publishers' trade advertising now as only too often a "talk in general terms" of the book's good qualities that is "a waste of time." He says—and here we emphatically agree with him—that trade advertising should be used to make the bookseller "intimately conversant" with the "profit-making possibilities" which the publisher has decided that the book in question has. "He must be instructed in all its saleable points, in exactly the same measure as the traveler is instructed." He must be "informed of the kind of person the book appeals to." In short, "he must be taken into the publisher's entire confidence in regard to all the considerations and arguments which weighed with the publisher in causing him to publish the book." That, it seems to us, is the function of trade advertising; perhaps Mr. Scott's criticism here is not unmerited.

In line with our recent editorial on "Developing the Sale of Technical Books" is the announcement by John Haynes Holmes, of the Church of the Messiah, New York City, of a series of seven Sunday morning sermons on "Fundamental religious questions as answered in recent books." Such a series of sermons, if properly followed up by the bookseller, should yield such a harvest of sales of these specialized books—if indeed books on a world-wide theme like practical religion can be called "specialized"—that we are printing Mr. Holmes' suggestive subjects and the books upon which his sermons will be based: "Is There A God?" See Arthur Balfour's "Theism and Humanism;" "Is Man A Spiritual Being?" (1) See Henry Fairfield Osborn's "Men of the Old Stone Age;" "Is Man A Spiritual Being?" (2) See Hans Driesch's "The Problem of Individuality;" "Was Jesus God or Man?" See Mary Austin's "The Man Jesus;" "Has Christianity Been Outgrown?" See Rudolf Eucken's "Can We Still Be Christians?"; "Is There A Standard of Morals?" See Durant Drake's "Problems of Conduct;" and "Are We Immortal?" See Harry Emerson Fosdick's "The Assurance of Immortality." In addition there will be a series of vesper talks on "Some modern scriptures of social religion" which will take their texts from "Unto This Last," John Ruskin; "Past and Present," Thomas Carlyle; "Yeast" and "Alton Locke," Charles Kingsley; "Aurora Leigh," Elizabeth Barrett Browning; "Progress and Poverty," Henry George; "Wealth Against Commonwealth," Henry D. Lloyd; "My Confession" and "My Religion." Leo Tolstoi. All of the above would also, of course, make excellent window display material. The average "religious book" window consists of a gloomy array of black Bibles. We should like to see a "religious" window devoted to "Practical Books Answering Live Religious Questions" with display cards asking in big, readable letters the vital questions asked in the seven sermons listed above.

Another generous field for the bookseller who sells books on special subjects to people who need them is to be found among teachers and school administrators. The present increasing interest in practical pedagogy and administration is reflected in the numerous valuable books on these subjects appearing monthly. As a rule teachers, and especially administrators trained at some such institution as Teachers' College at Columbia University, are eager to get in touch with new works in their field. A practical illustration of the attitude of educators toward such books was afforded us lately in a letter received from a recently appointed school principal in a sizeable middle western city. After acknowledging the receipt of a volume on "Elementary School Administration" he continued: "I had the pleasure of reading the companion volume on 'High School Administration' a few months ago, and found it most profitable. In fact, a member of the Board of Education invited me to his home a few weeks ago to look me over preparatory to making up his mind whether or not he would favor me for the superintendency. One question he asked me was this: 'What do you consider the duties of a school principal?' I answered the question almost in the words of the author of the book on 'High School Administration.' This is a good illustration of the way in which the reading of good books becomes profitable at unexpected times."

PUBLISHING: THE BUSINESS, ITS PROBLEM AND THE SOLUTION.

*The Second of Two Articles by Temple Scott.

II. THE SOLUTION OF THE PROBLEM.

In my first article I defined the business of publishing as an enterprise for the selling of books for a profit. I stated its problem in the form of the question: How are books to be sold widely and profitably? It is my present purpose to attempt a satisfactory answer to that question.

Every business has its own sphere of activity, its own methods of conducting that activity and its own rules of the game. In the process of the development of modern commercial and industrial life, each business has elaborated for itself definite lines of operation, along which, experience has taught, it can move with least resistance to the required goal, namely, success through profits. The publishing business, I find, is almost the only business which has not so developed. It has not evolved for itself a satisfactory modus operandi. The reason for this anomaly is, in my opinion, not far to seek. I find it in the fact that the publisher has come to depend, almost entirely, on another business—the business of the bookseller—to do his most important work for him. Time once was when the publisher did his own bookselling as well as his own bookmaking; now he relies on a middleman to do the selling for him. In this, of course, he has followed in the steps of all manufacturers who have been compelled by modern conditions to bring the middle-man into existence. But in following in these steps he has assumed that the article, "book," is on a par, as a merchandisable commodity, with other manufactured goods such as silk, cotton, boots, cloths, pins, needles and the rest. This has been his mistake. He has not realized that a book is a very peculiar article indeed, quite in a class by itself. It does not require that the middle-man shall be an expert in boots or pins or lead pencils to be able to sell them freely; but it does require expert knowledge to sell books. The market for boots, pins and lead pencils is practically unlimited; the market for books is decidedly limited, though its bounds may be widened by expert treatment. Boots, pins and lead pencils are a daily requirement; books are luxuries and are a necessity at all only for those who have leisure. The false assumption on the part of the publisher has led him to believe that the bookseller could deal with his product as any other middle-man deals with any other article of trade. It is this erroneous belief which is largely responsible for the unsatisfactory relationship between publishers and booksellers, for the continual discussion between them, and for the persistent demands of the latter for satisfaction for what they call their grievances. The bookseller, incompetent and unable to sell the books he buys from the publishers, demands unusual credit and larger discounts; he complains of competition, cries aloud at price-cutting and demonstrates frantically that his working expenses are inevitably in excess of his gross profits. Years have been spent in planning a modus operandi which shall assure the bookseller a modus vivendi, and the desired end is still far from having been attained. I know of no other retail business in any sphere of economic activity where the manufacturer has been so persistently and so continually called upon to assist the distributor, as has occurred in the bookselling business. The condition of affairs seems to run counter to all laws of sound political economy.

Is there a fundamental cause for this anomaly? I think there is. I think we shall find it by analysis of the publisher's attitude toward the commodities he manufactures and of his relations with the bookseller. I think there is confusion in the one case and delusion in the other. The confusion has arisen from ascribing to the generic term "book" an economic value, and the delusion has arisen from a belief that the bookseller is able to rectify this error on the publisher's part. Let me explain.

When we use the word "umbrella," for example, we employ a generic term covering all kinds of umbrellas of different prices. The generic meaning of the word is directly associated with the economic value of the article for which the word stands. The article is known and has economic value for its use—and its use is immediately understood by all parties concerned, namely, the manufacturer, the dealer and the buyer, the moment the word is pronounced. It is likewise with the words "table," "chair," "piano," the words at once tell the articles' uses. In the case of the word "book," however, the meaning is only very indirectly associated with its use or economic value. The generic term "book" has reference to the appearance of the article and not to its use. All umbrellas, all tables, all pianos, all chairs, are each alike both in appearance and use; but all books, though they may approximate each other in appearance, are not at all alike for use. This distinction is most important, because the umbrella-dealer is not called upon to exercise himself in recommending the umbrella's use—that is well known to everybody—but the book-dealer is called upon to exercise himself in recommending the book's use; and as no two books are alike in use he is compelled, if he is to be a successful dealer, so to exercise himself with each and every article he offers for sale, that the special use shall be made evident. To expect this of any dealer is to expect more than is reasonable, and in the case of the bookseller who has thousands of different books to deal with, it is to expect a miracle. Here we have the confusion and the delusion. The publisher has regarded all books as alike as articles of commerce, and, consequently, has expected the bookseller to deal with them as any other retailer deals with any other article of commerce. The truth is, however, that so unlike are all books to each other that each and every book must be dealt with by the retailer in a special way. Each book demands special knowledge on the part of the bookseller and calls for a special method of treatment in selling it. Ferrero's "Greatness and Decline of Rome" and Arnold Bennet's "Buried Alive" are both "books"; but they are so different from each other in use or economic value that it is the grossest of fallacies to put them on the same level as merchandisable articles. Indeed, so different are they from the point of view of economic value, that I will go so far as to say that it requires almost a different order of mind to sell one from that required to sell the other.

The confusion and the delusion being now made clear, the question arises: Can these be rectified? For it is on their rectification that the solution to our problem depends. If we are to find out how to sell books widely and profitably there must first be no obstacle in the way of our procedure.

The confusion can be cleared very simply by the publisher recognizing once for all that "books" as commodities, are sui generis, in a class by themselves as articles of trade, and taking upon himself to explain their uses. The delusion will be dissipated by the publisher's facing squarely the fundamental demands of his industry, namely, the methods for the profitable distribution of his wares. He, himself, must create the demand for his goods and use the bookseller as his distributing aid. How is he to do this? The answer to this question leads to the solution of the publisher's problem, and incidentally to the salvation of the bookseller. My answer is by advertising.

Now this would seem as if I had discovered the obvious. Well, I will let it go at that for the moment, merely remarking that the obvious is often so commonplace that we take no special note of it. But I mean far more by advertising than is generally understood by the word. I mean a special kind of advertising that is applicable to books alone. Books, as commodities, are in a class by themselves. They must, therefore, be dealt with in a special way, and not the way of the general advertiser. The expert who can devise catch-phrases and slogans for patent medicines, automobiles, breakfast foods and soaps will be utterly at sea in dealing with books. He will be the bull in a china shop in a publishing house. The selling of books calls for quite another kind of talent—I might even say genius—for the appeal must be made so that those appealed to shall realize a want they were not aware of. There is no difficulty in appealing to the physical sufferer or the hungry individual or the thirsty or the vain; the difficulty rather is in making one's self heard in the tremendous din of the many appeals that are everywhere thundered at us. But there is a difficulty, and a stupendous one, in awakening people to their poverty of mind or loneliness of heart or joylessness of spirit or barrenness of soul or foolishness of nature. And this is what the advertiser of books must be able to do if he is to succeed in selling them widely. But he must do more; he must make people believe that what he is asking them to buy will enrich their minds, cheer their hearts, give them pleasure, enhance their souls and make them wise. And he must do all this so deftly, so cunningly, that he shall seem a friend and a safe guide and not a spy or a critic of their failings. It will, I think, be admitted that I did not exaggerate when I applied the word genius to the ability of such an expert. And yet this high office is delegated to ill-educated clerks, who, if they understand anything of its duties, have obtained the knowledge in the lowest of all schools, namely, the schools of the professional advertising agent.

There is also another consideration, and a very important one, which the advertiser of books must take into account. It also arises from the peculiar character of his commodity. He must be extremely economical. He cannot afford to spend lavishly as can the advertiser of most other commodities. A breakfast food is eaten; a soap is consumed; a patent medicine is used up; a dentrifice is wasted—these articles must be continually replaced; so that the demand for them is constant. There need, therefore, be no cessation in recommending them and spending money for making known their good qualities. Indeed, there must not be a cessation, because of the many similar articles for the same uses which are on the market. A cessation would mean relinquishing the market to the others. It is quite otherwise with a book. A book is not consumed or eaten or wasted; it remains for further use, and not only by the original purchaser but by others to whom the book is loaned. One sale, therefore, may and, indeed does, prevent another sale of the same work. Libraries also prevent sales by offering a number of possible purchasers the opportunity to enjoy the book's use without payment. At best, then, the book-market is a restricted market. The advertiser of books, therefore, cannot permit himself to be careless of the advertising expenditure. If he does, he will find that he has spent his profits in making the sales. I have no doubt that with sufficient advertising it would be possible to dispose of a million copies of any one book throughout the United States; but the cost of reaching these million purchasers would be so great that it would be far in excess of the amount obtained from the sales—the game would not be worth the candle.

Advertising is a method of education—the education of the public as to the value to them of the articles advertised. With most articles it is not so much necessary to insist on their qualities as it is to insist on their superiority over other like articles. Advertising then becomes a play of wit or a clever exercise with words in order to catch the public's eye and the public's attention. If the article be given a new word or a trade-mark, advertising becomes necessary to enlighten the public as to its meaning and to associate it in their minds with their common wants. With sufficient advertising the word takes its place in the language and becomes a valuable asset as good-will. Even a firm's name may be so elevated that a "Steinway," a "Winchester" or a "Colt" stands not only for the things, piano, rifle and revolver, but for a special and superior kind of these things. The publisher, in both these respects, is in quite a different position. His books are not in competition with other books, so that he need not exercise himself in attempting to hold the market. And his firm, though it may obtain a high and wide reputation for good books, can never conjure its name into a synonym for the particular article. All Steinway pianos are alike in their use values; but not all Macmillan's books are alike in this respect. This difference in the uses of his books comes up for consideration on every side of the publisher's business activity. It is the pivot on which his whole enterprise constantly revolves; and any advertiser who may take it upon hmself to exploit books in the market must deal with his commodity in a special and distinguished way. Indeed, he must invent an entirely new method, unlike any method that may hold good for other saleable articles.

Publisher's advertising, therefore, must be economical advertising, in the first place, and, in the second place, it must be expert advertising. All expert advertising is economical, but the publisher's expert must be so able that his advertising shall possess a carrying momentum of unusual force, because the amount of money which can be afforded for this purpose is, in the publishing business, reduced to a minimum. The advertisements, therefore, must be so worded that one statement repeated a few times shall serve as well as and better than a thousand repetitions of feeble and jejune expressions which mean anything or nothing. The bull's eye must be hit every time. The publisher cannot afford a single miss; for fifty dollars so wasted may mean the loss of the profit on a hundred books sold. How does the publisher deal with this situation at present?

Most publishers employ an "advertising manager." As a rule, he is an advertiser in name only, and a manager by courtesy. He is, oftener than not, a clerk with a paste-pot and scissors for his most valuable tools. What brains he has he is compelled to sit on, and what genius may be in him is never fulfilled. He obeys instructions given him by the publisher himself, who has decided on the proper appropriation for advertising outlay, and who has his own ideas about the manner and the matter of publicity. Occasionally the clerk does make an effort to express himself, but originality is deemed dangerous to experiment with. He is, therefore, compelled to fall back on designing eye-catching type-arrangements and snipping and pasting the stereotyped announcements for display in "best positions." If a good, quotable review is available he adds it to the announcement. It is enough to make an owl laugh! I think I am not far out in my calculations when I state that the publishers of the United States spend, as a body, over two millions of dollars annually in newspaper and magazine publicity alone; and yet this enormous sum is, most of it, frittered away in printing futile statements and sterile appeals. It is dissipated in small amounts at a time—in paying for fifty lines single column, fifty lines double column, a hundred lines double or triple column, pages, half pages, quarter pages, inches of space. Is it any wonder that the publisher never knows whether or no the advertisements have "paid"? Is it any wonder he has come to be afraid of spending money in this haphazard fashion? The wonder rather is that he still continues to dribble away his substance and his profits in such vain efforts. And the great wonder is that he has not realized what he is losing in missing sales which he could make by expert attention to this most important side of his business.

There is no keener business man than the publisher when it comes to a bargain either in royalties with an author, or in the cost of manufacture with printers, binders and paper-makers, or in terms with the booksellers. He will then calculate to a quarter of a cent. But when it comes to advertising he seems to lose his head. He seems to be out of his element here, entirely, for he flounders about like a fish on land. And yet advertising is the very atmosphere in which his business can really be said to live. He is, however, so afraid of trusting himself in this new element that he prefers to pay exorbitantly for an already advertised author rather than try to make reputations himself. He does not see he is thus paying in advance for advertising, but that is surely what he is doing. To publish a book by H. G. Wells or Arnold Bennett or Rudyard Kipling is to invest, not in literature, but in advertising; and in advertising that adds more to the reputation of these writers than it does to the publisher himself. And even then he must spend more on more advertising in order to announce the fact that he is publishing their books. To conduct his business on such lines is to be utterly ignorant of the genius of the business. The genius of publishing is to sell what is not known, but what is worthy of being known. It requires no genius to pay largely for books by Conan Doyle, Hall Caine and Mrs. Humphry Ward and to sell their books. But it does require a special order of mind to sell Westermarck's "History of the Moral Idea" or Chamberlain's "Foundations of the Nineteenth Century," or Samuel Butler's "The Way of All Flesh," or Gilbert Murray's "The Rise of the Greek Epic." And there is reputation for the publisher and larger profits also if he knows how to sell such books. Why, I ask, does he not invest in the special order of mind to sell those books on which he will make substantial profits rather than speculate in the expensive popular authors? He may answer it does not pay to make reputations for unknown authors, because they may go to another publisher or ask higher prices later. That is no answer. In the first place he has made his profit out of the author in making his reputation; and secondly, the author with the newly made reputation merits a higher price because the extra outlay will be regained by the added advertising power. And, furthermore, the author should get the higher price because he also is in business for profits. If his books sell better he should be paid better. The publisher may, however, say that he would be only too glad to employ such an advertising expert as I have described if he could find him. He may tell me that he does not exist; that I am talking about an angel or a creature of fable. Well, I will agree that he is not a common being. He cannot be common or the publisher would have come across him long ago and thereby saved his own and the bookseller's businesses from falling into the parlous states in which they are today. He is a rare being, I admit, but he exists and he can be discovered. He is a composite of the scholar and the business man —the honors man of a university in literae humaniores, who is able to employ his scholarship and sympathetic understanding of literature for the public interest and the public benefit, as a business enterprise. My contention is that the publisher must find him, or some one like him, if he is to prosper and establish a sound business. If he cannot find him, he must create him or breed him; for without him publishing is not a business but either a playing at blindman's buff or a game of chance. Other businesses have found him. Why then is it impossible for a publisher to find him for his business? The truth of the matter is that he was never thought of. The publisher has jogged along in the well-trodden ruts of his business forgetting the times were changing. The race is now no longer to the swift or the strong; it is to the man with brains.

The question arises: How shall he serve him. I answer, in three ways: (1) By educating the bookseller, (2) by educating the public, and (3) by educating the salesman.

(1) The education of the bookseller.

The education of the bookseller must be systematic and thorough. Once the publisher has decided that the book has profit-making possibilities, the bookseller must be made intimately conversant with those possibilities. It would be a waste of time to talk in general terms to him of the book's good qualities, as is now done in the trade-paper. He must be instructed in all its saleable points, in exactly the same measure as the traveler is instructed. Further, he must be informed of the kind of person the book appeals to. In other words, he must be taken into the publisher's entire confidence in regard to all the considerations and arguments which weighed with the publisher in causing him to decide to publish the book. If he cannot be so confidentially treated, then the book ought not to be published, or the publisher must seek other channels for its sales. A "private" circular, for the bookseller's own reading, will give such information. A "public" circular, for the bookseller to mail to his customers, will give the information which will appeal to the buyer and reader. I shall deal with this "public" circular when I outline the advertiser's work in connection with the education of the public. At present I will deal with the form which this circular should take.

It should not be the form it takes at present. It should be in the form of a type-written letter, addressed, in courteous and simple and direct fashion, to the prospective buyer. This letter the publisher will supply the bookseller, at no charge to him, in an envelope containing a reply postal card (unstamped). The bookseller will fill in the name and address and sign it himself, and mail it at his own charge for two cents.

The publisher will be able to afford the outlay for such circulars and letters because, he will not find it necessary to spend so much in public advertising in the newspapers and magazines as he does now, and because he will sell more books by this method than he does by his present method of circularizing and postering and cataloguing. Moreover, this method will compel the bookseller to keep a classified list of his customers arranged under the headings of their "wants," which is the only kind of classification that has any profit-making value. The publishers' trade-paper should be remodeled on lines that will harmonize with this method for furthering the education of the bookseller. It should under no circumstances, print original reviews of books. All its so-called reviews should be supplied to it bv the publishers' own advertising experts. Its advertising pages should contain announcements of each and every book published by all publishers, with the expert's notice to each book. All these matters should be decided upon at a conference between publishers and booksellers. They should meet together and come to some proper understanding with each other. It must be no longer questions of net prices and discounts; it must be the question of how to co-operate for each other's best business interests.

(2) The education of the public

If the publisher is in earnest about his business he will deliberate with the advertising expert on each and every manuscript submitted to him. If he is wise he will, more often than not, take the expert's opinion rather than his own or his reader's. This is done by newspaper proprietors and by magazine publishers. The book-publisher can indulge himself in a freer license, but he must be very careful in how far he so indulges. Were the publisher to realize the wisdom of this course he would save himself much anxiety and many losses from bad ventures. It might happen that the annual output of books would be thus greatly decreased, and this

"The selling of books calls for quite another kind of talent—I might even say genius—for the appeal must be made so that those appealed to shall realize a want they were not aware of. There is no difficulty in appealing to the physical sufferer or the hungry individual or the thirsty or the vain; the difficulty rather is in making one's self heard in the tremendous din of the many appeals that are everywhere thundered at us. But there is a difficulty, and a stupendous one, in awakening people to their poverty of mind or loneliness of heart or joylessness of spirit or barrenness of soul or foolishness of nature. And this is what the advertiser of books must be able to do if he is to succeed in selling them widely. But he must do more; he must make people believe that what he is asking them to buy will enrich their minds, cheer their hearts, give them pleasure, enhance their souls and make them wise. And he must do all this so deftly, so cunningly, that he shall seem a friend and a safe guide, and not a spy or a critic of their failings. It will, I think, be admitted that I did not exaggerate when I applied the word genius to the ability of such an expert."—TEMPLE SCOTT.

might be a blessing to others than the publisher and bookseller.

The expert, having agreed with the publisher that the book should be published, will use the considerations that determined him in coming to this agreement for publicity purposes. He will distil from the book's matter all its selling qualities, and then he will redistil that until he has obtained the essence. To give an extreme example: Kant said that his "Critique of Pure Reason" would be read and appreciated more widely a century after it had been published. The expert would antedate that event by his insight and analysis and compel attention to the book at the time of publication. How he will do this will be up to him to find out. That is his business. That is what he is an expert for. If he has not the knowledge or the means in himself, he must obtain the knowledge and find out the means from others—from the publisher, from the reader, from the author, from the book itself. But the material he so obtains he must use in his own way, not the reader's or the author's way, for that way may be, and is most likely to be, the literary man's or the scholar's or the academic's way. His way must be the salesman's way. I do not mean to say that he could force a market for such a work as Kant's "Critique"—that is not my point. My point is that he would have done for Kant's book all that should have been done to arouse its own public to its special value. And Kant would himself have been delighted to help him. Bergson's "Creative Evolution" is a modern instance. Nine booksellers out of ten "passed" it when the traveler brought it round. Fortunately, for the publisher, the press acted the part of the expert and public attention was secured.

The publicity matter so elaborated and finished by the expert must be incorporated first in the form of the letter for the booksellers to mail, and, second, in the form of an advertisement for the purpose of printing in the newspapers and magazines. The booksellers' letter will be taken care of by the booksellers. It is when we come to advertising in the press that the business of publicity begins to present itself as a very complicated problem.

How much money shall be so spent, and in what mediums shall it be expended? Again these are questions which the expert must answer himself. He will know how much he can afford and he will know the proper mediums. But of this he must first assure himself, namely, that he has the right kind of "talk." The right advertisement will tell the tale very quickly. The more books it will sell the more will he advertise. That is the true principle of success in advertising. The expert will keep his chart for each book, even as a doctor keeps a chart for his patient, and the book's selling temperature will be recorded until such time as it may be discharged "out of danger."

As the sea of the press is as a great ocean on which to launch this cockle-shell of a book-boat, the publisher should contract for a special space in special issues of such newspapers as he decides to use. This special space may be large or small but it should be regularly filled by his "talk." Rogers, Peet & Co. do this in their way, the publisher should do it in his way, his expert's more distinguished and more arresting way. He will find that the total outlay annually will now be far less than it has been for him in the past. There will be no necessity for him to buy hundred lines for each book—the "talk" will do the trick in half or a quarter of the space.

Advertising in magazines is another ticklish problem. Most manufacturers and dealers must find it pays or they would not advertise in them so largely. But does this class of advertising pay the publisher? I am convinced it does not, at any rate, not with the kind of "talk" that is printed in them now. It is very costly, which compels the crowding of a number of items in a small space, and this is fatal either to impressiveness or power of appeal. Such advertising may pay at certain seasons of the year, perhaps the Christmas season in particular, when readers of the magazines are looking for seasonable gifts. But this class of advertising would undoubtedly pay more were the expert at work. Under the present excellent system of confining publishers' advertisements to the front part of the magazine, the expert's "talk" would become a feature to which readers would, in time, turn with new interest and zest.

The great desideratum however, in the publishing business, is a reliable Book-Buyer's Guide—a medium for every household in the country to serve the purpose of making known books and their true values. Such a guide should be sold and distributed at a nominal charge of, say, twenty-five cents per annum, and it should be issued every month. It should contain very short and telling reviews of only such books as deserve commendation and recommendation. It should appeal to every taste and every want by a contents so varied and treated as to make it readable and inviting. Its circulation should be promoted by every bookseller and every librarian, in their own interests, for it might be conducted to fit in with all their requirements, since it would not be a literary magazine, so-called. Learned criticism—on the higher or the lower plane—belongs to the learned reviews; there is no place for it in the average home. What is wanted is not a mixture of a Dryden preface and a Saint-Beuve causerie and a Ph.D.'s thesis, but a plain, honest, heart-to-heart talk, as from one human being to another. The world is alive to all that is living. There are enough books to write about once a month which have in them some genuine value for some if not all of us. Let this value be brought out. Was it not this very value which decided the publisher in selecting the manuscript for publication? Then let the same value be the text for the editor's recommendation. We have long been weary of the self-complacent superiority of the Podsnappian pedagogue. He is more interested in himself than he is in the world in which he lives. We want the expert with the fine mind who is interested in the world because he finds his best self in it—a man who can write an advertisement or a review of a book as O. Henry could tell a story about a human being. There would be a book-reviewer, if you will! He would be a benefactor; for the way to "make good" is to make good things. It is time publishers took thought and stirred themselves to enlist the creative gift in the interest of their business. They can get it if they will but pay the price. The Guide I have suggested would soon be self-supporting, if the publishers supported it with their advertising. Its editor, however, must be independent and free.

(3) The education of the salesman

Every business demands that its salesmen shall be instructed in the good qualities of the articles made for sale. The publishing business demands this in a special degree. Because of the variety of books there is a greater necessity for systematic teaching. The salesman should be treated on a par with the bookseller. What will help the bookseller to sell to the public will assist the salesman to sell to the trade. The salesman should never be sent on the road until he has thoroughly satisfied the adverising expert as to his ability to "speak his speech" with regard to every book he is taking on his journey. A tradesman educated and a salesman instructed in a publisher's books will mean that there will be no need, in the future, for the traveler to lug around hundreds of pounds weight of samples, every time he goes on journey. A catalogue and a grip with samples of the forthcoming books will suffice for all his purposes. The bookseller will welcome the traveler and will be ready with his orders—the advertising manager will have paved the way for the meeting.

I have sometimes amused myself by imagining my expert walking into a publisher's office and holding some such conversation with him as this:

"Why do you publish your edition of 'Don Quixote'?"

"Because it is a classic, and because I intended to sell it."

"How many copies of your edition do you sell each year?"

"I don't know, I'm sure—probably one hundred."

"Does that pay?"

"No—but the accumulated profits over four or five years will pay."

"Is that good business?"

"N-o-o!"

"What would you say if I told you you can sell five thousand copies a year?"

"I should say you didn't know what you were talking about."

"Do you?"

"Of course I do. I am a publisher and I know my own business."

"What are you in business for?"

"To make money."

"But you don't make money out of your 'Don Quixote'?"

"Not just now; but I will."

"How do you live in the meantime?"

"By the profits on other books."

"Then why publish 'Don Quixote'?"

"Who are you, anyway?"

"I'm an advertising genius. I can sell five thousand copies of your 'Don Quixote' every year."

"How can you do that?"

"That's my business; but I'll sell them just as they were sold three hundred years ago. I have the magic word—the word Cervantes secreted in his book. I have many more magic words—the magic words that all the great writers hid in their books, and that all the new writers hide in their books. I know the 'Open Sesame.' That is why I can sell them. Will you employ me?"

"Thank you, no. My business has no place for a genius."

"Is that why you keep Cervantes' books at your binders?"

"John, show this gentleman the door."

I think I have demonstrated that there is true virtue in my advertising hero. If, even, he be but the creation of my fanciful imagination and have existence only as an ideal, he is still worth studying and understanding. At least, we know now the elements which go to make up his perfection. For my part, I have come to the conclusion, after many years of experience, that the publishing business has reached the stage where systematization has become imperative. I have dealt with one great principle only; but there are many minor elements to be considered and harmonized with this principle. But this, any publisher, who is in agreement with the principle, can easily do for himself. He will subordinate, for instance, his manufacturing department, to its proper place. Indeed, if he deal with good and reliable printers, he may dispense with such a department entirely. As I have already said, a publisher is a manufacturer secondarily; primarily, he is an advertiser. It is quite possible for him to carry on his business on lines similar to the soap or the patent-medicine seller, namely, by arranging for the manufacture of his books with a printer and confining himself to advertising. I mention this side of publishing merely to emphasize what I consider to be the publisher's true business, which is not making, but choosing and selling books. Until he does seriously give his mind to these ends he will always have his problem and will always be called upon to exercise himself with the bookseller's problem, also. Some publishers possess, in themselves, this advertising gift, and these, it will be found, are the successful men. Not only do they know how to publish, but they know what to publish; for it is the man who can sell who best knows what to buy for selling purposes. He is the best judge of the article. As a consequence, he will not wait for manuscripts to be brought to him, but will suggest to the author what books to write. The business of publishing thus meets the business of writing on common ground, and still leaves room for the genius in letters.

COPYRIGHT LEGISLATION BEFORE CONGRESS.

EIGHT BILLS dealing with copyright, or containing copyright clauses, have been introduced into the House of Representatives during the present session. The old Levy bill, originally presented, May 2, 1914,[1] on behalf of Mr. G. W. Ogilvie and reintroduced in slightly different form January 23, 1915,[2] has again been presented by Mr. Oldfield. The American Publishers' Copyright League has lodged a formal protest against this bill (H. R. 3053), the object of which, it will be recalled, is the abolition of the so-called "secondary meaning" right.

Mr. Driscoll has reintroduced the bill which extends the period of ad interim copyright on books published abroad. This bill (H. R. 10,231), first introduced by Mr. Oldfield, on January 8 of last year,[3] has the formal endorsement of the American Publishers' Copyright League.

It provides for the extension of the period of ad interim copyright on books in English under section 21 from thirty to ninety days. Under section 31 (d) it proposes in the first, third and fourth sub-divisions to further condition the importation of books manufactured abroad, in the case of a single copy for individual use, a single copy for a society, institution or library, or copies en bloc for a society, institution or library, by the requirement that such importation be made "with the consent of the proprietor of the American copyright or his representative."

H. R. 7624, introduced by Mr. Barchfeld, defines "public performance for profit" as follows: "And the term 'public performance for profit' shall include any public performance in any place of business operated for gain though no direct pecuniary charge or admission fee to such performance is made unless such performance is given exclusively for a religious, charitable, or educational purpose." This would affect musical performances in restaurants and department stores.

At present labels or prints of an advertising or commercial character are not named in the sections providing for the copyright of artistic works. H. R. 420, introduced by Mr. Mott, proposes to make cartons, labels, trademarks, etc., subjects of copyright by inserting under section 5, which lists the categories under which copyright may be claimed, a new division, l, which would read: "Labels, trademarks, firm names, and special designs, pictures, prints, wrappers, cartons, containers, and advertisements which are specifically created for individual trades, manufactures, or businesses, engraved, printed, colored, or produced in any manner whatsoever." This bill would also provide under section 28: "That any person who willfully and for profit shall infringe any copyright secured by this Act, or who shall knowingly and willfully aid or abet such infringement, or shall knowingly and willfully make, sell, or have in possession any infringing copies of any work enumerated in section five, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished," etc. (New matter is in italics.)

A change in section 28, proposed in H. R. 8356 introduced by Mr. Morrison, would alter the present wording: "That any person who willfully and for profit shall infringe any copyright secured by this Act," etc., to read: "That any person who willfully and for profit shall infringe any copyright in any work protected under the copyright laws of the United States," etc. This change in wording is doubtless meant to assure copyright protection under the present act to copyrights secured under previous acts. This bill also provides for a change of the words "piratical copies" to "infringing copies, matter or material" in section 30, which would then read: "That the importation into the United States of any article bearing a false notice of copyright when there is no existing copyright thereon in the United States, or of any infringing copies, matter or material of any work copyrighted in the United States, is prohibited."

A verbal change is proposed in section 15 by H. R. 588, introduced by Mr. Bennet, which, after the insertion of the words or periodical, would read: "That of the printed book or periodical specified in section five, subsections (a) and (b) of this Act, except the original text of a book or periodical of foreign origin in a language or languages other than English, the text of all copies accorded protection under this Act, except as below provided, shall be printed from type set within the limits of the United States," etc. The words or periodical are also inserted in the cognate passage at the end of section 15, which would then read:—"but they shall not apply to works in raised characters for the use of the blind or to books or periodicals of foreign origin in a language or languages other than English," etc.

Two bills affecting the writing and production of motion pictures have been brought forward. H. R. 456, sponsored by Mr. Hughes, would require that a film receive "the certificate and seal" of the Federal Motion Picture Commission before copyright protection be granted to it. H. R. 3630, introduced by Mr. Randall, would amend sections five, nine, eleven, twelve and twenty-five of the copyright act so as to provide definitely for the copyright of scenarios. Under section 5 a new category, n, would be devoted to scenarios. Under section 9 a new provision would constitute typewriting with notice of copyright the "publication with notice of copyright" necessary to copyright a scenario. Under section 11, deposit would be required, "if the work be a scenario, of two typewritten copies of the title and description, with cast of scenes without prints or other identifying reproductions thereof."

All of these bills have been referred to the House Committee on Patents which consists of: Messrs. Morrison (chairman), Alexander, Oglesby, Smith of New York, Eagle, Crosser, McClintic, Steagall, Nolan, Carter of Massachusetts, Watson of Pennsylvania, Glynn, Charles, and Beales. Mr. Oldfield, chairman of this committee last year, is this year a member of the Committee on Ways and Means. The Senate Committee on Patents includes: Messrs. James (chairman), Shively, Smith of South Carolina, Gore, Brandegee, Kenyon, and Colt.

POSTAL LEGISLATION IN CONGRESS.

Despite the opposition of Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland, co-author of the parcel post law, who exhausted every parliamentary move to head off the legislation, the House, on February 28, approved an amendment to the Post Office Appropriation bill, which forbids the transportation by parcel post of packages weighing more than fifty pounds. Mr. Lewis denounced the provision as one that would cripple the parcel post and play into the hands of the express companies and the railroads. The Maryland member sought to recommit the Post Office Appropriation bill with instructions to the committee to change the weight limit to 150 lbs. This motion was defeated on a roll call, 179 to 139. Postmaster Burleson was understood to be behind the stubborn fight put up by Mr. Lewis.

While the Appropriation bill has been the most pressing postal matter before Congress in the last fortnight, two other postal bills are now pending. Mr. Tague has introduced a bill (H. R. 11,621) which proposes the extension of the bulk method to the mailing of catalogues, circulars, etc., so that these items, now mailable under eight ounces in weight at the third class rate of one cent for two ounces or fraction thereof, should receive a pound rate of eight cents. The text of this bill is as follows: "That on matter embraced in the third class, including circulars, catalogues, pamphlets, price lists, and other similar matter wholly in print of some form, upon which the postage is now paid at the rate of 1 cent for each two ounces or fractional part thereof, fully prepaid either by postage stamps affixed or without stamps under a permit number, the same rate is hereby extended to apply to the mailing of such printed matter in bulk, to varying addresses, irrespective of the individual weight thereof within a limit of four pounds, without stamps affixed, at eight cents per pound or fractional part thereof, to be fully prepaid in similar manner as now by law provided for the mailing of matter of the second class; but such pound rate shall apply only when such printed matter is offered in quantities of one pound or more.

"Sec. 2. That this Act shall take effect upon its passage."

A second bill (S. 195), introduced by Mr. Lodge, would extend a one cent per pound rate to books and printed matter passing between libraries and their users. The text of this bill provides: "That, subject to such regulations as the Postmaster General may from time to time determine, books and other printed matter belonging to and passing between the libraries enumerated below and passing between said libraries and legal users thereof be admitted to carriage by mail at 1 cent per pound or fraction thereof, namely: Public libraries, maintained wholly or in part by taxation by towns, cities, States, or other political units, or by the United States; school libraries supported by taxation, or having tax exemptions, belonging to educational institutions of all grades; society or social libraries having entire or partial tax exemptions or other public privileges, maintained by endowment or taxation, or from both sources, by religious, literary, professional, trade, industrial, or library associations, or incorporated libraries maintained by stock or share holders or regular annual subscribers.

"Sec. 2. That this Act shall take effect from and after its passage."

The House Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads includes Messrs. Moon (chairman), Finley, Bell, Cox, Rouse, Blackmon, Holland, Beakes, Griffin, Tague, Black, Ayres, Randall, Steenerson, Madden, Griest, Copley, Hamilton of New York, Lafean, Paige of Massachusetts, Britt, and Kalanianaole. The Senate Committee includes Messrs. Bankhead (chairman), Smith of South Carolina, Swanson, Bryan, Martine of New Jersey, Lea of Tennessee, Vardaman, Hardwick, Beckham, Penrose, Townsend, Catron, Colt, Weeks, Sterling, and McLean.

APPELLATE DIVISION HANDS DOWN NEW DECISION IN DEBEKKER-STOKES CASE.

In the Publishers' Weekly for June 27, 1914, mention was made of the suit brought by Leander J. DeBekker, the author of "Stokes' Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians," against the Frederick A. Stokes Company, involving several points but chiefly demanding an accounting and damages for an arrangement entered into by the Stokes Company with the University Society, Inc., for what Mr. DeBekker claimed was an unauthorized subscription edition of his "Encyclopedia."

The Stokes Company immediately appealed from the adverse decision of the New York Supreme Court. The full opinion of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court on the appeal is as follows:

Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Second Judicial Department.

Jenks, P.J., Thomas, Stapleton, Mills and Putnam, J.J.

Leander J. DeBekker,
Respondent, against
Frederick A. Stokes Company and The University Society, Incorporated, Appellants.

Reargument of appeal by the defendants from an interlocutory judgment of the Special Term, entered in the Clerk's office of the County of Kings on the 22nd day of May, 1914.

Per curiam:

"Upon the reargument the conclusion is reached that the sixteenth finding of fact should be reversed, and it is found 'That the plaintiff has been damaged by the publication of the work pursuant to the contract between the defendants.' The first conclusion of law is reversed, and it is decided 'That the contract made by the defendant Stokes Company with the University Society on October 5th, 1910, was made in violation of the plaintiff's rights under his contract with the defendant Frederick A. Stokes Company and was entered into without the knowledge, consent or approval of the plaintiff herein, and was a breach of the contract of July 19, 1907.'

"The second, third, fourth, fifth, seventh and eighth conclusions of law are reversed. It is decided 'That the plaintiff is entitled to final judgment against the defendant Frederick A. Stokes Company for the amount found due plaintiff on said accounting, but the defendant Frederick A. Stokes Company is entitled to be credited upon such accounting with the sum of $600 advanced by it to the plaintiff upon the contract of August 20th, 1908,' and, 'That plaintiff is entitled to judgment against the defendants and each of them for such damages as flow from the breach of the contract.' It is further decided that the plaintiff is entitled to receive royalties as prescribed by the contract on sales to the entry of the interlocutory judgment herein, and that the defendant Frederick A. Stokes Company should account for the same. The former opinion is modified so far as it directs different disposition of the appeal or method of accounting, or ascertainment of royalties or damages.

"As the plaintiff has not appealed from the judgment, the court's direction as to costs is unaffected.

"The interlocutory judgment should be modified to conform to the findings as amended, and as so modified affirmed, without costs."

The second decision is in some respects more favorable to the Stokes Company than the first one was, but their counsel state that the case will be appealed to the Court of Appeals.

NEW YORK BOOKSELLERS LEARN INS AND OUTS OF JOBBING BUSINESS

Between seventy-five and one hundred members of the New York Booksellers' League gathered in the rooms of the Baker & Taylor Co. on Tuesday evening where members of the Baker & Taylor staff initiated them into the intricacies of book jobbing. Following a brief address of welcome by Herbert S. Baker, president of the firm, Mr. McKeachie described the work of a metropolitan jobber's city trade department. Three things he asked the bookseller to bear in mind in ordering from the jobber: Give the publisher's name wherever possible—ninety per cent. of the orders reaching the Baker & Taylor Co. omit the publisher's name. Specify the edition wanted or the price in cases where more than one edition is available. Get the list boys down to the jobber by ten o'clock whenever possible as eleven and eleven-thirty are crowded hours and orders are naturally filled less rapidly.

Following Mr. McKeachie, Mr. Corrigan told of the work of the advertising and service departments. Glenn Parker then conducted the booksellers over the plant, explaining step by step the story of an order from the time it arrives to the time it leaves by list boy or wagon. Incidentally, twelve or thirteen men handle each order in the course of its progress and each item on the order is handled seven times. After the booksellers had wandered up and down and gotten lost a dozen times in the miles and miles of books in the stock room they appreciated the reason for the Baker & Taylor relay team being in such prime condition each summer at the Booksellers' League Field Day. When the pilgrims returned from their long trek through the stock room they found a half dozen white liveried attendants bustling about opening up a big ice cream freezer and carving up cakes, while a big coffee percolator—the kind they have in the dairy lunches—had appeared from nowhere and was "perking" away in the middle of the room.

It was announced that a couple of the publishing houses will open their quarters for similar meetings of the League later in the spring.

INTERESTING ITEMS OF AMERICANA SOLD.

A COLLECTION of rare American books, pamphlets, and manuscripts, 166 lots, brought a total of $15,489.25 at a recent sale in the Collectors Club, New York. The highest price, $2000, was paid by George D. Smith for "Narrative of Hannah Swarton," published at Boston, Mass., in 1697. Bound in with it were "Humiliations Followed with Deliverances," by Cotton Mather, and "A Narrative of the Captivity of Hannah Dustan." There is a copy of the Swarton captivity in the Library of Congress, but it lacks the title and the first four pages. It has hitherto been considered unique. Robert H. Dodd gave $1850 for one of the rarest of Benjamin Franklin imprints, being one of only two known copies. It is "The Charter, Laws, and Catalogues of Books of the Library Company of Philadelphia," printed in that city in 1757 by Franklin and D. Hall. Mr. Smith obtained for $1650 "The History of the Kingdom of Basaruah," printed in New York in 1715 by William Bradford, New York's first printer. Mr. Dodd bought for $530 "Letters to the Right Honorable, the Earl of Hillsborough, from Governor Bernard, General Gage, and the Honorable His Majesty's Council for the Province of Massachusetts-Bay," Boston, 1769. Only one other perfect copy is recorded.

Mr. Smith paid $255 for William Bradford's masterpiece, "An Essay on Scripture Prophecy," by Governor William Burnet, New York, 1724, the only edition of a very rare book, privately printed for its author. He paid $190 for another William Bradford imprint, "The Principles of Truth, being a Declaration of our Faith, who are Call'd Quakers," by Edward Burrough and others, Philadelphia, 1688. "A Mid-night Cry from the Temple of God to the Ten Virgins, Slumbering and Sleeping," New York, printed by William Bradford, 1721, went to Mr. Smith for $710. It was written by John Rogers, founder of the Quaker-Baptist Sect, called "Rogerenes." It is the second edition, and is believed to be unique. Mr. Dodd paid $310 for "Medicina Britannica," by Thomas Short, printed by Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia in 1751. It is one of the earliest books on botany printed in the American Colonies. Mr. Smith gave $155 for John Haywood's "Natural and Aboriginal History of Tennessee," Nashville, 1823, the only edition of one of the rarest of the early books on the American aborigines. Lathrop C. Harper obtained for $290 Edward Johnson's "History of New England," London, 1654. It is one of the most valued sources of contemporary New England history. Mr. Smith bought for $480 "Bonifacius, an Essay Upon the Good that is to be Devised and Designed," by Cotton Mather, Boston, 1710. He also paid $355 for "The Voice of God in Stormy Winds," by Increase Mather, Boston, 1704. The "Mohawk Prayer Book," the rarest of all the American editions of "The Book of Common Prayer," one of only two copies known, went to Mr. Smith for $1010. Walter M. Hill, of Chicago, obtained for $350 the first book printed in the United States on the subject of railroads, John Steven's "Document Tending to prove the Superior Advantages of Railways and Steam-Carriages Over Canal Navigation," New York, 1812.

BOOK-TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW YORK BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE March dinner of the New York Booksellers' League will be held on Wednesday the 15th. John Cowper Powys, lecturer and author of "The War and Culture," "Vision and Revision," "Wood and Stone," etc., will be the guest, and will speak on a subject to be announced later. The annual election will take place at this meeting.

OBITUARY NOTES.

FRED DEFAU, head of the firm of Fred DeFau & Co., New York City, died at his residence in Brooklyn on February 23 in his fifty-second year. His associations with publishing and bookselling were confined exclusively to the subscription field in which he achieved marked success. Previous to establishing his own firm, twenty years ago, he was connected with Knight & Brown, at 150 Fifth avenue, who were well-known pioneers in the subscription book business.

DR. LORENZO SEARS, author of many books on American literature, died at Providence, R. I., in his seventy-ninth year on February 29. He was formerly Professor of Rhetoric in the University of Vermont, and later, from 1890 until he retired in 1906, held professorships in Brown University. One of his best-known books was "The Makers of American Literature," published in 1904. Other books by him are: "The History of Oratory," 1896; "The Occasional Address, Its Composition and Literature," 1897; "Principles and Methods of Literary Criticism," 1898; "American Literature in the Colonial and National Periods," 1902; "Seven Laws of Literary Composition," 1904; "Wendell Phillips, Orator and Agitator," 1909; "John Hancock, the Picturesque Patriot," 1912.

MRS. CLARA ERSKINE CLEMENT WATERS, writer and lecturer on travel and art, died on February 20 at Longwood, Mass., in her eighty-second year. She was born in St. Louis. Her home in Boston was a gathering place of noted writers, artists and musicians and as a hostess she assembled there many people distinguished in various professions. Mrs. Waters was the author of "Handbook of Legendary and Mythological Art," "Painters, Sculptors, Architects, Engravers and Their Works," "Artists of the XIXth Century" (with Laurence Hutton), "History of Egypt," "Life of Charlotte Cushman," "Eleanor Maitland" (a novel), "Stories of Art and Artists," "History of Painting," "History of Sculpture" and "History of Architecture," a series for beginners and students, "Venice, the Queen of the Adriatic," "Naples, the City of Parthenope," "Constantinople, the City of the Sultans," "Rome, the Eternal City," "Angels in Art," "Saints in Art," "Heroines of the Bible in Art," and "Women in the Fine Arts."

THE DOWAGER QUEEN ELIZABETH of Rumania (Carmen Sylva) died on March 2, in her seventy-third year. A week ago she fell ill, and inflammation of the lungs quickly developed. Queen Elizabeth of Rumania (Pauline Elizabeth Ottilie Louise) was the consort of King Charles I. She was the daughter of the late Prince Hermann of Wied and the Princess Maria of Nassau. In early life she evinced a talent for literature, and adopted the pen name of "Carmen Sylva," by which she was best known during the last decades of her life. Her lively imagination led her to the path of literature, and more especially to poetry, folk-lore, and ballads. In addition to numerous original works, she put into literary form many of the legends current among the Rumanian peasantry. Her earliest publications were "Sappho" and "Hammerstein," two poems, which were published at Leipsic in 1880. In 1888 she received the Prix Botta, a prize awarded triennially by the French Academy, for her volume of prose aphorisms, "Les Pensées d'une Reine," published in Paris in 1882, the German version of which is entitled "Vom Amboss," and was published in Bonn in 1890. Several of Carmen Sylva's works were written in collaboration with Mite Kremnitz, one of her maids of honor; these were published between 1881 and 1888, in some cases under the pseudonyms "Ditto et Idem," and these included the novels "Aus zwei Welten" and "In der Irre," "Anna Boleyn," a tragedy, and a collection of short stories. In 1894 appeared "Edleen Vaughan, or Paths of Peril," and ten years later "Sweet Hours," poems, both of which were published in London and written in English. In addition, Carmen Sylva translated Pierre Loti's "Pêcheur d'Islande" and Paul de St. Victor's "Les Deux Masques" into German. One of the latest and best-known of her works, "The Bard of the Dimbovitza," in which she was assisted by Alma Strettell, was a collection of Rumanian folk songs and legends. This was published in 1891 and was soon reissued and expanded. Translations from her original works have appeared in all the principal languages of Europe and in Rumanian. Probably the best known of all her voluminous writings was "A Real Queen's Fairy Book," 1901.

HENRY JAMES, the novelist, died on February 28 at his London residence, 21 Carlyle Mansions. He had been ill for several months, but late in January his physicians reported that he was improving. The affection from which he suffered was chronic and had been complicated by two strokes of apoplexy. About two weeks ago Mr. James's condition became grave again, and his recovery was not looked for. It was his own wish that his body should be cremated. Though born an American, long residence abroad had made of Henry James a European, and he died a British subject. In the New Year honors which King George conferred in January, 1916, he was awarded the Order of Merit. Although an expatriate by choice, he was not without honor in his native land. He was one of the first men elected to the American Academy of Arts and Letters—the "American Immortals," as they are called—and he also received the honorary degree of doctor of letters from Harvard University in 1911. The distinguished novelist, critic and playwright was born in New York, April 15, 1843. His father, Henry James, sr., was noted as a writer on ethics and religion; and his younger brother, William, was later to become distinguished as a psychologist. The family was possessed of an ample fortune, the foundation of which had been laid by the novelist's grandfather, of Scotch-Irish descent, who migrated from Ulster soon after the Revolutionary War. Henry James' earliest short tale, "The Story of a Year," appeared in the Atlantic Monthly in 1865. This was followed by others, until 1869, when he again went to England this time to settle there. His first book, Watch and Ward, appeared in 1871. Then came A Passionate Pilgrim and Roderick Hudson in 1875; Transatlantic Sketches, 1875; The American, 1877; French Poets and Novelists, 1878; The Europeans, 1878; Daisy Miller, 1878; An International Episode, 1879; Life of Hawthorne, 1879; A Bundle of Letters, 1879; Confidence, 1879; Diary of a Man of Fifty, 1880; Washington Square, 1880; The Portrait of a Lady, 1881; Siege of London, 1883; Portraits of Places, 1884; Tales of Three Cities, 1884; A Little Tour in France, 1884; The Bostonians, 1886; Princess Casamassima, 1886; Partial Portraits, 1888; The Aspern Papers, 1888; The Reverberator, 1888; A London Life, 1889; The Tragic Muse, 1890; Terminations, 1896; The Spoils of Poynton, 1897; What Maisie Knew, 1897; In the Cage, 1898; The Two Magics, 1898; The Awkward Age, 1899; The Soft Side, 1900; A Little Tour in France, 1900; The Sacred Fount, 1901; The Wings of the Dove, 1902; The Ambassador, 1903; The Golden Bowl, 1905; English Hours, 1905; The American Scene, 1907; The High Bid, 1909; Finer Grain, 1910; The Outcry, 1911; Small Boys and Others, 1913; Notes of a Son and Brother, 1914; Notes on Novelists, 1914. He was also a playwright, having dramatized his "Daisy Miller" and "The American" and having more recently written "'The High Bid," in which Forbes Robertson appeared in London. A number of his books of criticism were written in French, and have been highly praised in France for their style. Henry James's work was never so popular in America as in England. Few of his novels dealt with American life in itself. He chose now and then an American scene for his books, as in "Washington Square" and "The Bostonians"; but in such cases he selected his locality with discretion and relied for his chief characters on foreigners and traveled Americans. The fact that he was always independent of the need of catering to what the public wanted, since his fortune was sufficient, enabled him to adhere religiously to his own principles of romance regardless of how popular they might be. Notwithstanding this indifference, he had, particularly among the English people, a host of readers, who virtually formed a cult known as the Jamesites.

PERSONAL NOTES.

W. MORGAN SHUSTER, president of the Century Co., is at present on a pleasure trip in the Philippines. He will return in May.

WILLIAM H. WALKER, widely known in the rare-book trade and formerly of the firm of Walker & Stonestreet, New York, has undertaken the management of the Joseph McDonough Co., Albany, N. Y.

IT IS ESTIMATED that Mrs. Jennie Stone Helm, who died at Lexington, Ky., on February 29, made more than $1,000,000 as a magazine agent. About twenty-five years ago Mrs. Helm went to Lexington and became a teacher in the city schools. To increase her slender income she solicited subscriptions to periodicals. She expanded her business until she had established the J. M. Hanson Magazine Agency, a business name she chose. In 1914 Mrs. Helm negotiated a merger with the Bennett Magazine Agency of Chicago and became president and controlling stockholder. She once was offered $100,000 for her subscription lists.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

BRANDER MATTHEWS' two important books, "Shakespeare as a Playwright" and "Molière," will be published by the Scribners in March in a new and cheaper edition.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. announce "The Heart of Thunder Mountain" by E. A. Bingham and

"The Blind Man's Eyes" by William MacHarg and Edwin Balmer for March 18.

SAMUEL DUFF McCOY, heretofore known to the reading public only as a poet, has written a historical romance "Tippecanoe," which the Bobbs-Merrill Co. will publish on March 18.

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the death of Henry James comes the announcement from Dodd, Mead & Co. of "Henry James, a Critical Study," by Ford Madox Hueffer. It will be published in April.

AFTER THREE YEARS OF CIVILIZATION Tarzan, the ape-man has reverted to the wild and in "The Beasts of Tarzan," published this week by McClurg, Edgar Rice Burroughs tells more of his wild adventures in the jungle.

"SOCIAL VALUES AND NATIONAL EXISTENCE" by Theodore Roosevelt is one of the contributions to Volume X of the Sociological Society Proceedings, published by the University of Chicago Press under the general title "War and Militarism in Their Sociological Aspects."

THE VIR PUBLISHING CO. has just issued a booklet containing photographs of twenty-two actual window displays of the Hall sex books published by them. Both large and small windows are shown, and it will pay the bookseller to send for the booklet before staging his own exhibit.

JUDGE COLLIN, of the New York State Court of Appeals, handed down a decision in the Shubert-Woollcott case on February 22, holding that criticism displeasing to the controller of a theater is legal ground on which the critic may be barred from playhouses under his control.

AND TO THINK that the author of "The Friendly Road," "Adventures in Friendship," and "Adventures in Contentment" is not a kindly farmer-philosopher named David Grayson, but a metropolitan journalist who also writes articles on politics and other non-pastoral subjects!—Ray Stannard Baker.

THE WILLIAMS BOOK STORES CO., Boston, is out gunning for remainders big and little: publishers remainders, complete book store stocks, library duplicates, school books, and especially the "Book of Knowledge," the "Harvard Classics," the "11th Edition Encyclopedia Britannica," limited editions and large paper Houghton Mifflin editions.

A NEW NOVEL BY CHARLES KINGSLEY is a strange announcement, but it is nevertheless true. In Cornhill has just appeared the first two chapters of "A Tutor's Story," a MS. left unfinished by Kingsley, and recently discovered among his papers. It is revised and completed by his accomplished daughter, "Lucas Malet."

"CONTRARY MARY'S" big successor—or perhaps we should say her running mate, since she is still very much alive—is to be Edwin Bateman Morris' "Our Miss York," which the Penn Publishing Company will publish on March 15. In it a career and the man bid for the heroine's heart. The jacket for the new book is by Coles Phillips.

CUPPLES & LEON COMPANY have made a thorough revision, according to the latest usage and authority, of their Webster's New Century Dictionary. The entire book has been reset in new type and reprinted from the new plates. A condensed compendium of miscellaneous information for ready reference is included, by which much time can be saved.

ON MARCH 14 a testimonial will be given to William Winter at the Century Theatre, New York City. A memorial inviting Mr. Winter to accept the testimonial was signed by President Wilson, ex-Presidents Roosevelt and Taft, Governor Whitman of New York, Mayor Mitchel of the city of New York, and more than one hundred other prominent people.

A CHILD OF THE ALEXANDRIAN GUTTER, a petted beauty of the Alexandrian palaces, a queen of Alexandrian sinners, a redeemed woman seeing a vision of Christ upon the Judean hills, and finally a mystic saint upon the desert, was Mary of Egypt, the heroine of "Behold the Woman!" an historical novel of redemption in the Fourth Century, A. D., by T. Everett Harré which the J. B. Lippincott Co. will publish April 3.

MARCH 8 is the date set by the Macmillan Co. for the publication of Nathan Kussy's "The Abyss," which the publishers are confident will prove one of the big novels of the year. It tells of the experiences of a Jewish orphan boy in New York, a boy who never had a chance and who, through all his associations with beggars and the outcasts of society, retained right impulses and the desire to live better. The story is the outcome of many years' work by this new author.

THE TYRANNY OF MOTHER LOVE, the hardest of all tyrannies to break because it cannot be broken ruthlessly, forms the unusual theme of Rachel Swete Macnamara's "Drifting Waters" (Putnam), published to-day. This new book by the author of "The Fringe of the Desert" tells the story of the rebellion of a young girl against the jealous proprietorship of a mother's love. The mother demands from the daughter a singleness of devotion to the exclusion of everyone else. The daughter falls in love, and the clandestine expression of her attachment, which the circumstances demand, involves developments of far-reaching interest to the unfolding of the story. The scene is in part England, in part Egypt.

JOHN LANE COMPANY will publish, on March 10: "A Book on Belgium's Gratitude," published as an expression of the gratitude felt by Belgians for the help of the British Empire and the United States; "War Letters of an American Woman," by Marie Van Vorst; "The Way they Have in the Army," by Private Thomas O'Toole, a little volume which conveys a faithful representation of the life, customs, duties, etc., of the men in khaki; and "The Dune Country," by Earl H. Reed, author of "The Voices of the Dumes," "Etching; A Practical Treatise," etc., who here presents a graphic and poetic description, with the help of sixty drawings, of the dune country that skirts the shores of Lake Michigan, and the sparsely settled region that lies back of it, with its wild life and the eccentric old characters who live in little driftwood shanties.

THE WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT of the Chicago Herald has aroused a flurry of interest in Congressional and literary circles by the announcement that Col. Edward M. House, President Wilson's confidential adviser, is the author of "Philip Dru, Administrator," a work published by B. W. Huebsch in 1912. As the hero, Philip Dru, works an entire reconstruction in the American system of government, Congressmen are reported to be eagerly searching the pages of the book for Colonel House's views on the development of the army and navy. Among other things "Philip Dru, Administrator" describes a battleship with turrets protected by rims of polished steel mounted upon ball-bearings which were so nicely adjusted that they would spin around when struck by a shell and thereby deflect the shell.

POLITICS FROM THE INSIDE, it would seem from the recent success of biographies of public men, has a strong appeal in these days when we have come to realize, with some concern, that our country's government has a not inconsiderable effect on our daily lives. In "Notes of a Busy Life," just published by Stewart & Kidd Company, the Hon. Joseph Benson Foraker has sketched his experience of three years in the Union Army, three years on the Bench, four years as Governor of Ohio, and twelve years in the Senate of the United States. He covers the Spanish-American war, the Panama Canal, and many other important subjects, closing with comments on modern developments in political methods and practices, having special reference to the initiative, referendum, recall and primary system of making nominations.

BOOTH TARKINGTON'S "Seventeen" will be published by Harper & Bros. on March 10. It tells how romance invaded the untroubled life of William Sylvanus Baxter, age seventeen, and is a perfect portrait of hobbledehoy youth. William is so deliciously humorous—with his intent manner, his assurance that W. S. B. and his feelings are the most important matters in the world, his exaggerated sense of his personal dignity, and his first calf-love. He is in love with Miss Pratt and dreams of an early marriage. Little Sister Jane, her mouth greasy with bread and butter, her ears always open, and her inquisitive mind always searching into William's affairs, is as much of a creation as Penrod himself. And, of course, there is a dog in this book, one to join the company of the doggiest dogs Mr. Tarkington can picture—Clematis, who belongs to the negro gardener.

ONE OF THE FINEST KNOWN sets of the first edition of "Pickwick Papers" was bought by George D. Smith for $1,175 at the sale of the library of the late Mrs. Gertrude Cowdin at the Anderson Galleries on February 20. A set of twenty etchings by George Cruikshank to illustrate Brough's "Life of Sir John Falstaff" was bought by George D. Smith for $1,525. "The Life of Napoleon Bonaparte," illustrated by Cruikshank with twenty-four colored plates, brought $510 from J. F. Drake. It is a first edition. A collection of Lord Byron's autographs, including a letter to Lady Frances Wedderburn in Paris, was bought by G. Weis for $325. Other sales were: Set of the works of Thomas Hardy, all first editions, bought by G. Weis for $265; complete works of George Meredith, with portraits on Japanese paper, bought by G. Weis for $222.50. The total sales of the day amounted to $13,334.70. The total for the entire library was $26,383.55.

ON MARCH 11 the George H. Doran Co. will publish "The Beloved Traitor," in which Frank L. Packard tells the story of a young Breton fisherman in whom a multi-millionaire patron of the fine arts discovers one of the greatest sculptors France has ever produced; "The S. S. Glory," a sea story by Frederick Niven; "The Amateur" by Charles G. Norris, who depicts the career of a young man who comes to New York with an ambition to make a name for himself as an artist; "Today and Tomorrow," verse by Charles Hanson Towne; "What Germany Thinks" by Thomas F. A. Smith, author of "The Soul of Germany," who here discloses what the average German thinks about the Great War; "Illustrations From the Great War" by J. W. W. Moeran, a collection of incidents of the Great War carefully selected for their fitness as illustrations of the lessons to be drawn from the great conflict, and as the tremendously vital and interesting exposition of moral values sometimes obscured in times of ease and peace; "The Dynamic of All-Prayer" by G. Granger Fleming, a call to modern men and women to use the power and strength of prayer in their lives.

ONE OF THE BOOKS

Which we recently maunfactured complete was the "Anthology of Magazine Verse" for Gomme and Marshall.

Concerning this book the New York Times Book Review of January 9th has the following very flattering comment:

"And if the editor of the Anthology deserves praise for the work of his brain and hand, it would seem only fair to add that he has been ably seconded by the hand and brain of his publisher. A more tasteful and beautiful volume than the 'Anthology of Magazine Verse for 1915' would be hard to find—certainly at the very modest price asked for it."

THE MAN OF PROMISE

WILLARD HUNTINGTON WRIGHT

AN AMERICAN NOVELIST WHO MUST BE RECKONED WITH

$1.35 net

JOHN LANE -COMPANY- NEW YORK

A PROMISE FULFILLED

An Unusual Novel

One finds in "The Man of Promise," by Willard Huntington Wright (Lane), the precise group of qualities that distinguish the average American novel by their complete absence. That is to say, one finds literary style, a delicate and accurate sense of form, and an intelligible and interesting idea, competently worked out. Superficially, the thing suggests the method and point of view of John Galsworthy, say in "The Patrician" and "The Purple Flower," for there is on the one hand his scrupulous and a bit hard workmanship, and on the other hand his ironical attitude toward the sentimentality of ordinary fiction, and no less of everyday life. But there is no sign of direct imitation, nor even of appreciable influence. Mr. Wright has plainly thought his thesis out for himself, and devised his own investiture for it. The result is a novel that, after the other novels of the day, with their maudlin idealism and emotion-monging, seems almost arctic in its restraint and remoteness, but that still leaves upon the civilized reader an effect of poignant drama, and even of tragedy. There is a touch of the Greek spirit in it. It makes its appeal not to the tear ducts and midriff, but to the centers of reflection, and even if it falls a bit short of its apparent aim, it is yet full of a classical dignity.

The idea underlying it is simple, and, at bottom, obvious enough, though Nietzsche's voicing of it brought down upon him the abuse of the pious. In plain words, it may be conveniently stated thus: That the influence of women upon a man of any force and originality, far from being inspirational, is often intolerably hampering, and that in this business of holding him down, what are called good women may be quite as inimical to him as what are called bad women.

Such is the story in its substance. It is worked out with endless ingenuity and earnestness. It lifts itself far above the common run of native fictioneering, and, if only for its complete freedom from conventional charlatanism, deserves genuine respect.—H. L. Mencken In the April Smart Set.
